Language learners often find themselves unable to progress to native-like levels of competence, a phenomenon known as reaching a plateau.

Support international students’ rich, contextual, everyday learning about the language and culture of their host country, and enable them to leverage their new knowledge in formal learning contexts.

Language learners as independent individuals actively constructing, sharing and reflecting on knowledge found in everyday situations.

Offer hard-to-reach adult learners in migrant populations a way to share and reflect on their experiential learning in everyday life and lower the threshold to enter formal adult education.
